

Search this site

GO

British News

April 11 2012

BRITAIN

Politics
Labour 2002
Conservatives 2002
Lib Dems 2002
The Euro
Foot-and-mouth
Spending Review 2002
College of Law Results

TIMES ONLINE

Home
Breaking news
Britain
World
Business
Sport
Your Money
Comment
Sports Book
Travel
Shopping
Classifieds
Law
Games
Crossword
Motoring
Student
Sunday Times

NEWSPAPER

Sunday
Monday
Tuesday
Wednesday
Thursday
Today
Saturday

QUICK CLICKS

Appointments
Arts
Books
Contact Us
Creme
Education
Film
Finest
First night
Food and Drink
From the Archive
Good University Guide
Health
Online Specials
Play
Promotions
Property
Style Guide
Subscription
Supplements
Talking Point
Television and Radio
The Register
Times e-mail
Times 2
Times Services
Weekend

October 10, 2002

US planes sprayed Wiltshire with Sarin

FROM CHRIS AYRES IN LOS ANGELES AND MICHAEL EVANS

CROPDUSTER aircraft flown by British and US military personnel sprayed deadly chemical weapons, including Sarin and VX, over the Wiltshire countryside in the late 1960s. News of the tests is broken in declassified documents released this week by the Pentagon.

They took place at the highly secretive Porton Down facility near Salisbury, despite there being virtually no information about the long-term health effects of even very low exposures to the lethal nerve agents.

As well as Sarin and VX, the tests involved Soman and Tabun. According to the documents, seen by The Times, the chemical weapons were used on open grassland and woodland.

The Ministry of Defence said last night that none of the tests was carried out on human beings or animals. The only people concerned were the military and scientists studying the effects of the chemical and biological tests.

More than 600 documents exist detailing the experiments in the 1960s: "The documents speak for themselves," a ministry spokesman said.

The object of spraying Sarin, Tabun and VX gases over fields and woods was to see "how they would be affected by the climate and other atmospheric conditions". Tests at sea were to check how chemical and biological agents might affect warships.

Hundreds of documents have been released by the Public Record Office in Kew about chemical and biological experiments at Porton Down in the 1950s and 1960s when human beings were used as guinea pigs. Those tests, however, involved small amounts of the gases and agents in laboratory conditions.

Those who "volunteered" from the military have claimed in recent years that they were told the experiments were about the common cold. Wiltshire police are investigating the case of Ronald Maddison, who died in 1953 after Sarin was put on his skin.

The Pentagon released the new files at the request of the Department of Veterans' Affairs, which is lobbying for extra healthcare services for the 5,000 or so Americans involved in chemical and biological weapons testing.

It is not known how many Britons were involved, but

ALSO IN THIS SECTION

Blair tells Adams the IRA must disband

Archer faces loss of prison pay over diary

Blair flies to Russia in hope of buying off veto on Iraq

Minister for work to cut 20,000 of his own staff

Chemical scare after tycoon's poison suicide

Major evades questions of affair

BREAKING NEWS

Britain from PA

Death threats teenager in hiding

Pressure builds in Northern Ireland

Putin voices Iraq weapons doubts

ITV broadcasters plan merger

Rail fares set to rise

ADVERTISEMENT

TOOLS & SERVICES

Find a holiday

Search our database of flights, city breaks, holidays and late deals, today including 2 nights in Paris from only £105

Money Shop

Search and compare loans, credit cards, mortgages and other financial products and buy online

Urban Brunch

An exclusive offer on Harden's Guides in association with Ford Fusion and Harden's, and a list of the best cafés, restaurants and pubs in Britain for Brunch Sunday Times

The Sunday Times Enterprise Network

Case studies, information, advice, events and exclusive offers for middle market businesses online

Football auction

Signed shirts, programmes, autographs and more

Crossword Maestro

Get the expert software system for solving crosswords

ADVERTISEMENT

JOB FINDER

Search for appointments in:

The Times

The Sunday Times

GO

FIND A CAR

Search for a car from the Times Online used car database, powered by Motortrak

SEARCH NOW

claims for extra healthcare benefits by US servicemen could prompt similar claims in the UK — if any are still alive.

The test results are not known. It is also not known if the deadly agents were used directly on military personnel.

Crop-dusting was not the only method used to “weaponise” the nerve agents. The files explain how British and US military personnel used “rain-type” munitions and bombs.

The declassified documents acknowledge a far wider use of chemical and biological weapons than admitted by the British or US Governments. The disclosure could not come at a worse time for Tony Blair and President Bush, who argue that Iraq’s stockpiling of such nerve agents justifies a “regime change”. President Saddam Hussein used chemical weapons in the Iraq-Iran war in the 1980s and against his own Kurdish citizens.

Sarin, infamously used on the Tokyo subway by a terrorist group in 1995, causes a runny nose, watery eyes and breathing difficulty. It soon leads to vision problems, confusion, a coma, then death. VX causes vomiting and violent fits before death, all within about 15 minutes.

According to the documents, the project was ordered by Robert McNamara, the US Secretary of Defence, just after President Kennedy’s inauguration in 1961 and when Harold Macmillan was Prime Minister. The tests did not take place until 1967 and 1968, when Lyndon Johnson was US President and Harold Wilson was Prime Minister. The Porton Down tests were part of a British, US and Canadian programme. The US scrapped its biological weapons programme in the late 1960s.

- A report published yesterday said that lie detector tests were mostly inaccurate and had failed to catch a single spy, in spite of nearly a century of use. The report, by the National Academy of Sciences, urged America’s security agencies to stop believing that lie detectors, or polygraphs, are “magical mind-reading machines” and to acknowledge that they rarely produce reliable results.

At present all employees of the CIA and National Security Agency are given a polygraph test. The FBI and Defence Department also test extensively.

READER SERVICES

FAST TIMES

The latest information to your mobile phone

PDA

News direct to your palm-top

TALKING POINT

Visit the Times Online discussion forum

SPORTS CALENDAR

Search the full year's fixtures

YOUR WEATHER

Request the latest local weather forecast

SHOPPING

Browse and buy online from a range of special offers

CROSSWORD BOOK

Can you complete The Times crossword? Buy the latest crossword compendium here

ARCHIVE

Search for stories published from 1985 onwards in The Times and The Sunday Times

TO ADVERTISE

Contact our dedicated sales team for details on advertising and sponsorship with Times Online

Contact our advertising team for advertising and sponsorship in Times Online, The Times and The Sunday Times.

Copyright 2002 Times Newspapers Ltd.

This service is provided on Times Newspapers' standard Terms and Conditions. Please read our Privacy Policy. To inquire about a licence to reproduce material from The Times, visit the Syndication website.